Tuesday was the coldest day we have had this season. It made us think of "long killing" and Bangs Landram's famous recipe for sausage.

Gov. Hiram Johnson, in a statement issued recently, charges that petty politicians who pictured Hughes as a reactionary caused the Republican defeat in California.

Some of the owners of Posted land became very much excited this week when they heard hunters were on their farms. A horseback rider and runner were dispatched to the scene of action at once and if the guilty parties had been found--well watch and see what will be done with them.

LOSES FINE COW.

Mr. N. B. Cheatham had the misfortune to lose a valuable milk cow last Sunday from the effects of eating parsnips, left carelessly around his meat house. He tells us she was well worth one hundred dollars.

WILSON'S LEAD INCREASES.

As the count progresses in California, which is very slow and many counties yet to report, Wilson's lead increases by 200 votes. The count in Minnesota has also increased Hughes vote in that state. Indications are now that the Republicans will have a small majority in the House.

MORE MULE SALES.

Good mules are still selling well in this county and are in good demand. Some of the sales here this week were made by local farmers. Mr. Taylor House sold a nice pair to W. H. Burton for $420. Robert Fox sold three six year old mares to Bright and Fox, for $600, and James Royston a pair to same parties for $380. Bright and Fox also sold a dandy 3 year old team to Pence Brothers for $430.

DEMOCRACY AND TAMMANY

In 1912 William J. Bryan drove Tammany Hall out of the Baltimore convention, and without the support of New York State, nominated a candidate who was neither obligated nor subservient to its malign influence, says the Elizabethtown News.

In 1916 Woodrow Wilson has been re-elected president of the United States without the vote of New York state, and in face of the treachery of Tammany Hall.

They have been put out of the Democratic party like Christ drove the Money-changers from the Temple, and all honor to William J. Bryan and Woodrow Wilson who do not want a Presidential bargain made on Wall Street's terms.

TURPIN EXONERATED.

Irvine Turpin, the colored chauffeur, while driving the car owned by W. B. Burton, was exonerated from blame by a coroner's jury, for running over and killing McKee Irvine, a ten year old boy at Hedgeville last week. The testimony showed clearly that it was an unavoidable accident. Turpin was released.

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

The National W. C. T. U. Convention meets in Indianapolis Friday the 17th. In 1879 when Indianapolis was "Hostess City" of the National Convention, Frances E. Willard was elected President. The Christian people of all denominations are rejoicing over the spiritual and moral uplift the city will receive from this great gathering of Christian women.

WATCH OUT.

The way of the transgressor will be hard if they are found hunting on any of the farms which are posted. These public spirited men are determined to protect the pheasants and the few remaining quail in this section. The names and names of owners of posted land are found in this paper each week and there is no excuse for anyone not knowing.

KENTUCKY MAGAZINE.

The first issue of the Kentucky Magazine, the publication which is to present what is best in Kentucky made its appearance last week. The magazine, which bears the imprint of Lexington and Louisville, treats of the resources, institutions, material, moral and educational progress, the character and achievements of Kentucky men and women, and the great possibilities of the state's future development. The complimentary copy sent us from this office showed the magazine to be a work of art from every standpoint.

NIMRODS SCARCE.

Owing possibly to the fact that so many of the farms in Garrard county are posted, in order to preserve the pheasants that are being propagated so successfully, that only sixty hunting license have been issued by County Clerk Hamilton during the year.

More than twice this many were issued last year and about the same number the year before. Hunters are warned not to hunt on any of the farms posted, the names and owners of which can be seen in every issue of the Record.

O'Hearn.

Mrs. Thomas O'Hearn died at her home on the Lexington road at an early Tuesday morning.

Her death was very sudden, dying of rheumatism of the heart before a doctor could reach her. She was a lovely Christian woman and had reared a splendid family. Beside her husband she is survived by ten living children, four girls and six boys who have the tenderest sympathy of the community. Funeral services were held at the home this morning by Rev. H. Schulte, of Richmond, after which interment took place in the Lancaster cemetery.

GEES AND MORE GEES

One of the largest drives of geese seen in this section for several years, passed thru the public square last Tuesday morning, being driven from the farm of Walton Moss, where they had been fattened for the poultry dealers, Bailey and Moss. There were 1804 geese in the drove and it was a curiosity not often seen anywhere and of course attracted much attention.

They were sold to Richmond parties and were driven through the country, a distance of twenty-five miles, where they will be slaughtered for the eastern markets.

BEETS THAT BEAT THE BEATER.

Mrs. Will Palmer brought to this office five beets which weighed 47 lbs. Wonder who raised the largest potatoes and cabbage in the county.

DANVILLE TO REALLY HAVE A HOTEL.

The Danville Advocate states that the asbestos roof has just been put on the hotel and that plastering has commenced. It also states the third floor will be finished and ready for occupancy in about three weeks. What are we interested in is the first floor where one can get something to eat.

LOUD LUMBERING AND HEAVY CANNONADING.

Lancaster and Garrard county Democrats had a big celebration last Friday night that started about seven o'clock and continued until well up in the night. The public square was crowded with enthusiastic men, women and children. Roman candles and balloons played quite a part and the heavy firing of the anvils could be heard for ten miles. It was certainly a noisy bunch, especially the boys, numbering several hundred that marched through every street, with their Rah, Rah's that showed that they were well equipped with good cheer leaders.

CENTRAL RECORD

THE FALL CLEANUP.

Too many farmers, progressive in most respects, who raise orchard fruits do not practice having a thorough and general cleaning up of the orchard before winter closes in.

Brush piles, heaps of leaves, rubbish along the fence rows, and unsaleable fruit are allowed to remain in the orchard until spring before being burned or otherwise disposed of. Nearly all the insect pests that make trouble for the orchard owner take advantage of everything in the nature of rubbish in which to spend the winter. Time spent in the fall clearing everything that will harbor insects is a profitable flight when the enemy is taken at a disadvantage.—Farm and Fireside.

WINTER STORAGE.

Fruits and Vegetables Should Be Stored For Home Consumption.

Be prepared to meet the high cost of living by storing fruits and vegetables now, is the advice of M. F. Ahern, professor of landscape gardening in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

"Do not pay winter prices for fruits and vegetables," said Professor Ahern, "when by a simple reorganization of the cellar or some digging in the garden storage room can be provided for the preservation of large quantities of this class of food."

"If the fruit shrivels or becomes spongy and decays the fault in most cases can be traced to the storage room and may be corrected wholly or in part. The cellar must be well ventilated if fruit is to be kept successfully for any length of time. Temperature and humidity are factors quite as important as ventilation. The best temperature for fruit is 33 degrees or a little above.

"It is not well to allow much fluctuation in the temperature. In the cellar uniformity of temperature is maintained by means of ventilation, which should be watched closely.

"Apples may be packed either in barrels or in boxes. The preference is usually given to the boxes. In the case of apples that are to be kept for a considerable time it is a good plan to wrap each one separately in a piece of paper."

Favorable conditions of moisture and temperature are obtained by burying the fruit in pits, points out Professor Ahern. To prevent apples tasting of the earth they should be placed in boxes, barrels or other containers which keep them from direct contact with the soil, or the pit may be lined with boards.

Storage requirements for vegetables differ widely. The sweet potato and the squash are kept successfully only when the temperature is high and constant and the humidity is low. Root crops and cabbage can best be stored in pits. For storing cabbage in this manner the heads are pulled with the roots and leaves attached and placed upside down. Earth is placed on the pile until the plants, including the roots, are entirely covered.

The Strap as a Jar Opener.

Unscrewing the tops of jars is a simple operation with the aid of a strap or belt strap. The strap cannot slip because the harder it is pulled the harder it grips the jar. If the main part of the jar can be held to withstand the pull of the strap the most obtrusive cover will have to capitulate.

Where the ordinary types of jar openers do not fit, the strap is an effective substitute.—Popular Science Monthly.

Improving Potato Seed.

The Wisconsin experiment station among others, has been giving special attention to potato seed improvement and of late years is showing that proper storage of seed stock is just as important as the improvement of seed.

For several years the main effort was to standardize the leading commercial potato varieties grown in the state. The number of the most improved varieties has been reduced to six, some of which give test results under the different varying conditions of climate and soil in different sections of the state.

When holding the seed stock for supplying growers in the spring with improved seed it was found by the station experts that the seed lost much of its value through the effect of improper storage conditions. To make sure of good and safe storage a cellar was built in a well drained hillside. The walls and roof of this cellar are of concrete construction. Both walls and roof were then lined with lumber, which provided an air space of one and one-half inches. This cellar, with a storage capacity of 3,600 bushels, has now been in use for three years and has given excellent satisfaction.

Treat Virtue With Honor.

The greatest offense against virtue is to speak ill against it.—Hinzlitz.

Little Nutrition in Oysters.

Stutzer maintains that it takes 11 oysters to contain as much nourishment as one egg, and 223 to equal a pound of beef, says the New York Medical Journal. And their cost is triple that of beef.

This One Limps.

This is an illustration of a trap nest, not a guillotine. It is designed to help the poultry breeder to find out his good layers and to keep pedigrees. It is very simple. It may be attached to the under side of the drooping board, with the front facing the pen and arranged so that it can be easily removed. The drooping board will then be the roof of the nest.

The rear of nest may be of wire for the sake of ventilation. If the nest is placed on the wall, slats or wire should be inserted from the front of the nest.

to the wall at a sharp angle to prevent the hen from roosting on the nest. When she enters the nest the hen's back raises the door, which releases the catch and allows the door to shut. The catch should be set so that its edge just holds the door, the position being secured by a screw or nail at the lower inside edge of the catch. A washer on the screw will prevent it from sticking. The guard around the catch holds the nesting material away. The nest should be visited frequently to release the hens.—Popular Science Monthly.

BARN WISDOM.

"Barns For Wisconsin Dairy Farms" is the title of a new bulletin issued by the Wisconsin experiment station. The following counsel applies most any where:

Gambrel roofs give more room for hay than do gable roofs. This is an important point to consider.

The barn should have its length run north and south if the largest amount of direct sunlight is to be let inside. Rectangular shaped barns are more satisfactory than round ones.

The location should be at least 200 feet from the house and handy to a well, shed and granaries. Draining is necessary if the stock is to be kept healthy. Concrete is the best product than can be used for the foundation, ground floor and wall of the barn.

Build the barn large enough to meet future needs and to permit the handling of the maximum capacity of the farm. If the new barn just holds the stock at time of building another barn will probably be needed soon.

In One Way a Coward,
In Another Brave
By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

One night at 9 o'clock in the autumn of 1911 Edward Dewey, a wealthy banker and broker, arrived in a taxicab before his office, near the Stock Exchange, and, dismissing the chauffeur, entered the building. The janitor, who was near the door, saw him enter and go up the main stairway, the elevator not running.

A few persons, probably doing night work in the building, were coming and going till a late hour. The janitor saw Mr. Dewey's chief clerk, Clarence Hobson, leaving at about 10 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock George Henkard passed the janitor and went upstairs. Henkard was a protege of Dewey's, and since Dewey had no children it was expected that Henkard would be his heir. He was also engaged to Dewey's favorite niece, Alice Dewey. Ten minutes after 11 the janitor, who was at some distance from the entrance door of the building, saw a man pass out whom he believed to be Henkard, but he was not sure, because he saw only the back, and at that time of night the light in the building was dim.

At midnight the janitor walked through the building and, seeing a light in Mr. Dewey's office, stopped and listened. After waiting some time and hearing no sound from within he opened the office door and entered a private hallway on which the offices of John Dewey were situated. The light was in Mr. Dewey's office. The janitor knocked and, not receiving any reply, opened the door. There sat Dewey resting against his desk dead.

The police were called and found that he had been shot in the back. Before him on the desk was a set of books of the concern of which he had been the head.

There was no doubt as to the identity of the murderer, for George Henkard was not seen again after the janitor had seen him, or a man supposed to be he, pass out of the building shortly after 11 o'clock.

Clarence Hobson was the only person connected with Edward Dewey's business capable of managing it, and he was appointed by the court to wind it up. This was the time when business on the stock exchange was suspended on account of the pan-European war. Hobson was fighting a battle on the part of the concern he represented, and it was generally supposed that he would pull it through, because Dewey had not been carrying stocks "on a margin," his customers being legitimate investors who bought and sold outright.

But one day, to the surprise of all, it was announced that the firm, which still did business under the name of Edward Dewey, had failed. Meanwhile it had leaked out that Hobson had been carrying a considerable load of stocks on his own account when the European war broke out, covering the great panic of August, 1914.

Among those who participated in that war was an American who was enlisted under the name of Douglas Sawyer. He joined the American Legion and was with the French army when it was driven back on Paris just before the battle of the Marne. He seemed bent on getting himself killed, but despite his exposing himself in every possible way refused to strike him. Instead of getting killed he got promoted, and in a few months after his enlistment had reached the rank of major.

Then suddenly, to the surprise of everyone, he tendered his resignation. This is not expected of an officer when there is work still to be done, but since Major Sawyer had distinguished himself so honorably and was an American, his resignation was accepted, and he left France for America. On arriving he went to a police station and gave himself up to George Henkard.

The affairs of Edward Dewey were being wound up by a receiver. A fortnight before Clarence Hobson had committed suicide, and the receiver had announced as the probable cause that he had, before Mr. Dewey's murder, been speculating in stocks, had been caught in the war panic, and it was his difficulties that had caused the suspension of the law toward the concern.

George Henkard made the following explanation as to his flight. Desiring to see Mr. Dewey upon a private matter at once and being told that he had gone to his office, Henkard followed him there. He found Dewey dead. He remembered having seen and been seen by the janitor entering the building. It was known that he was the heir of the murdered man. The two facts constituted a clear case of murder, and nothing but further than that would surely turn against him. He would take the obliquity of flight and find death on the battlefield of Europe.

Before leaving, he told what had occurred to his fiancee, Alice Dewey, who had kept him advised of what was transpiring at home. When the denunciation came she informed him by cable, recommending him to return at once. He was never tried, and when the affairs of Edward Dewey were wound up there was a considerable surplus, which he and his wife inherited jointly.

Henkard's friends differ in their opinion as to his course in running away at the time of the murder. The truth is, he was advised to do so by his fiancee, who not only realized his sensitive nature, but believed that during his absence it was possible, if not probable, that the real murderer would be found.

Real Chinese Dragon.
That dragon monster of which the Chinese are so fond did actually exist, according to a Shanghai correspondent of the London Times. It is known that reptiles existed, very similar to the favorite pictured dragons, and there is reason to believe that some measured as long as 60 feet.

COLD WAVE ARRIVES.

The cold wave swept down on us suddenly Tuesday night just as some of us were trying to convince ourselves that it would not arrive. Some people who like to talk about the weather, claim that the thermometer went down as low as twelve early Wednesday morning, while most of them report about 16 to 18 degrees above zero. There were some snow flurries Tuesday night and last night was still cold with some prospect of rising temperature today.

QUALITY VERSUS QUANTITY.

Many housewives make a vital mistake in choosing some of their food-stuffs on the basis of quantity.

It has been proven time and again that the cheapest is always the most expensive, while the highest price is not always the best.

There's a happy medium in everything. When you select foods, be careful. Don't choose any particular brand of, say Baking Powder for example, just because you get a big can for a small price.

The risk you take in ruining your entire baking and losing the cost of the materials involved is not anywhere equal to the small amount saved on the price of the Baking Powder.

Then again, because the price is high, don't think the quality is the best. Some women do, and they are losing money.

Look for the happy medium. You'll find it. Choose a brand that costs a moderate price and you'll find it more economical to buy and more economical to use.

The best Baking Powder in the world can be made so as to sell for 25¢ per pound.

News Of The Churches.

The meeting conducted by Rev. F. M. Tindel at Herring School house for the past two weeks, closed last Tuesday night with several additions.

At the Memorial Methodist Sunday School of Lancaster, a collection amounting to $12.50 was taken for the Armenian sufferers. Also, a collection amounting to $7.50, and a crate of eggs, valued at $10, were sent to the Metho dist Orphan's Home at Louisville, the past week.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Memorial Methodist church observed the Week of Prayer, November 5-11. Each member present enjoyed the Missionary program in connection with the Bible study. A free will offering, amounting to $8.25, was taken for the Methodist school in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and Holding Institute at Laredo Texas.

Hereafter, the Woman's Missionary Society will meet at the parsonage, on the first Thursday afternoon of each month, at 2 o'clock.

The Womans Club
(Edited By The Womans Club)

The Woman's Club meets promptly at 2:30.

Miss Fannie Rawson of Frankfort Public Library, will lecture at Womans Club room November 24th. All club members should look forward to meeting this charming woman and hearing a delightful speaker.

All womanhood will be interested in Miss Jeannette Rankin who ran on the Republican ticket in Montana, and was elected to be the first woman ever to sit in Congress. Since her election telegrams of congratulations have been sent to her from women in this and every other section of the country until, according to reports from her home town, Missoula, she has been deluged with them. Miss Rankin announces in reply that she will represent all the women of the country and not only those of her own State.

She is about 34 years old and is about five feet four inches in height, slender, with light brown hair, her friends insist—has an unusual store of energy. She is the daughter of one of the best-known of the Montana pioneers, who went West when the State was so sparsely settled that it resembled a wilderness, and she and her three sisters have learned to "rough it" in the big Western State. She was graduated at the University of Montana, became an ardent suffragist while a girl and went to Seattle to study voice culture, and then went to New York City to take a course at the School of Philanthropy in that city.

Miss Rankin is a very feminine woman. It is said she dances well and makes her own hats, and sews, and has won genuine fame among her friends with the wonderful lemon meringue pie that she makes when she hasn't enough other things to do to keep her busy.

She is the sort of girl who won't stop until she has the results she is after, and it will be lots of fun to see her in her first flight in Congress. She is this sort; her father was trying to rent one of his houses in Missoula Mont., and there wasn't any sidewalk in front of it. A prospective tenant was found, but the tenant said he wouldn't take the house unless it had a sidewalk. Jeannette called up some carpenters and found them too busy to lay the sidewalk. And so she bought the lumber, borrowed a hammer and saw, and laid the sidewalk herself.

Among the things which Miss Rankin has announced that she will fight for in Congress is extension of the child labor laws—she intends to represent children as well as women in Congress—national woman suffrage, mothers' pensions, universal compulsory education, and similar propositions. It is expected that she will introduce a new national suffrage bill as soon as she has the opportunity.

Miss Rankin was among the early and most ardent workers for suffrage in the West before any States had granted women the vote.

MONTANA WOMAN

SENT TO CONGRESS.

Messages of congratulation from suffrage leaders in many parts of the country poured into Missouri for Miss Jeannette Rankin, Republican, the first woman to be elected to Congress. Miss Rankin's campaign managers contend that she had been successful by at least 2,000 majority.

"I felt that the women would stand by me," Miss Rankin said to-day. "It is wonderful to me to think of having the opportunity of being the first woman to sit in Congress with 434 men."

Miss Rankin is small and slight. She is a graduate of the University of Montana and the School of Philanthropy of New York City.

A BIT OF PHILOSOPHY.

From Good-By Er Howdy-Do.

By James Whitcomb Riley.

Say good by er howdy-do—
What's the odds betwixt the two?
Comin'—goin', ev'ry day—
Best friends first to go away—
Grasp of hands you'd rather hold
Than their weight in solid gold.
Slip their grin while greetin' you.
Say good by er howdy-do!
Howdy-do, and then, good-by—
Mixes jes' like laugh and cry;
Death and birth, and worst and best,
Tangled their contrariest;
Ev'ry jinglin' weddin'-bell
Skeerin' up some funer'l knell.—
Here's my song, and there's your sigh,
Howdy-do, and then, good-by!
Some Ons's runnin' this concern
That's got nothin' else to learn;
Ef he's willin', we'll pull through—
Say good by er howdy-do!

PERFECT HEALTH

This Man Was Rheumatic Cripple Five Years.

FINDS STRENGTH NEW WAY

John Lands, Victim of Chronic Stomach Weakness, and Generally Run Down Constitution, Tells How He Won New Vigor—Now Hale and Hearty, Enjoy Life to Limit.

Can YOU smile like this? Henry, jolly, contented—it's the smile of perfect health. It comes from bounding red blood.

Joy in living, the vim and vigor of sound manhood.

How long since YOU have smiled like this. Be honest with yourself. Do you face the mirror in the morning with cheery pleasure over another day born, or do you get up tired, droopy and weary, with a bad taste in your mouth, aches in your body and bones, and a grumpy feeling against all the world in your heart? If the latter, then you need just what John Lands needs.

John Lands is the smiler in the picture. He is a machinist and lives at 712 Freeman avenue, Cincinnati. It is the experience he has been through that makes him smile today.

Hobbled on Crutches.

For five years John Lands has suffered from a weak stomach and kidney trouble. Rheumatism set in and at times made him virtually a cripple. He had to hobble around on crutches for weeks at a time, laying off from his work, losing time and money, suffering agony.

"I have taken fully a hundred different kinds of medicine to relieve my condition during the last five years," he said. "But nothing seemed to help." Then I had an extremely bad case of rheumatism. Once I had to lay off work for four months. I had to use crutches a good many weeks at a time.

"Look at me now! I am Hale and hearty and enjoy life to the limit. I am in full possession again of all my natural vigor."

Tanlac Did It.

"What did it? Tanlac, the wonder new tonic and system purifier. It is one hundred per cent efficient. No medicine I ever took has done for me one-tenth of what Tanlac has done.

Ask any of my friends who have seen me daily. They will tell you the same thing. This Tanlac is positively marvelous."

Optimistic Thought.

He knows much who knows how to hold his tongue.

Monopoly.

"That man prides himself on being a conversationalist," "Yes," replied Miss Cyanine. "He's never so happy as when he unites a string of people with their trains while he monopolizes the bureau of information."

A Surprise

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

I was steaming down New York bay in an ocean liner on my way to England. Standing on the deck near me a man was peering seaward, evidently moved by some strong emotion. I watched him for a few minutes, when seeing that he was so intent upon something that was passing through his mind that he was not conscious of standing within a rail so low that a pitch of the vessel might take him overboard, I took him by the arm. He turned his gaze upon me as a somnambulist awakened.

"Pardon me," I said; "the ship is to be sold to get the rollers. You might lose your balance."

"Thank you very much," he replied. "I am much given to losing myself when intent upon something, and this scene has brought back the principal event of my life."

"It is a story?" I asked.

"It is." We were both silent for a few minutes, when the gentleman, with rare confidence in me, a perfect stranger, told the following story:

"Thirty years ago today I was steaming down this bay, standing as now, on the forward deck. But that is the end of my story instead of the beginning.

"When I was twenty-five years of age I met and fell in love with the daughter of a physician. She returned my love, but her parents objected to our marriage. They said that Edith was too young. She was plenty old enough to be married, being nineteen. The real reason was that they thought she could do better than to marry me. I did not doubt that she could, but I was wrapped up in her as she was in me, and I did not care to give her up to that some better person than myself.

"I was employed in a lace importing house. They decided to establish a buyer in Brussels, and they offered me the position with a large increase of salary. I accepted it gladly, for at that time Edith and I were engaged, and the advanced salary would enable me to support a wife. When I told her of what I regarded as my good fortune she looked troubled. She was aware that her parents objected to me as a husband for her, and she surmised that my going to live abroad would excite so strenuous an opposition on their part as to bring about a parting between her and me.

"She was right. Her mother strongly urged her to break off with me. Edith stood out till she began to suspect that if she persisted longer she might be deprived of her liberty, then gave in. I received a note from her saying that she could not bring herself to leave her dear father and mother to live in a strange land. She was their only child. They had brought her up with great care, and now that she was arrived at an age where she could be of the most comfort to them it would be ungrateful to them to marry a man whose only way of supporting her would be to place an ocean between her and them.

"She asked me to come before leaving and bid her farewell, after which she said she hoped that I would be able to forget her. This naturally filled me with despair. I declined to see her again, fearing that it would not be best either for her or for me. Had she made me union dependent upon my remaining in America I would have renounced my situation abroad and waited for preference at home. But she did not place me in such position. Instead of going to see her, I wrote her a few lines, giving her up and bidding her for her own good to think no more of me and move to her own advantage.

"That night before sailing I walked the floor, never once thinking of my dressing. It seemed that the morrow would be the funeral of a friend I had hoped for since meeting Edith. At 1 o'clock in the morning I threw myself on a bed and slept a troubled sleep till 7. Then I arose and finished the last arrangements for my journey. It seemed like preparing for death.

"I went aboard at noon, the hour for sailing being 2 o'clock. The crowd of people hurrying to and fro maddened me, and to escape them I went to my stateroom, sat down on the seat under the portholes and gave myself up to despair. I heard the call, 'All ashore that's going,' and it sounded like the call of the coffin of the universe. Then the tug puffed alongside, carrying the huge bulk out into midstream. When I had listened for some time to the monotonous throb of the engine I pulled myself together, went on deck and stood at where you saw me a few moments ago, a prey to the most despondent emotions. Suddenly I felt a touch on my shoulder and, turning—

The speaker turned and faced a mild, dignified, but attractive woman, whose face wore a smile which was in her eyes as well as on her lips.

"It is the poor alicant mother telling his story to whomsoever he can get to listen to him?"

The narrator introduced me to his wife and concluded his story:

"I felt that same touch and looked into the face of this same woman, then a girl not quite twenty.

"At the last moment she had suggested that her parents spend some time abroad, and the prospect of being near her induced them to return to her with me. She hours was all the time they had for preparation."

Feed
Grinder

You will find every one of them on all

INTERNATIONAL FEED GRINDERS

A strong steel stand prevents wobbling. Two lag screws hold the machine firmly in position. The grinding plates are self-aligning and therefore grind evenly. A spring tension on the grinding plates insures even grinding. A plate shifter lever at the end of the shaft is a safeguard against breakage and makes it a simple matter to clean the plates.

An International feed grinder and an IHC oil engine make an ideal combination. The engine will furnish convenient power for operating the feed grinder, and is especially adaptable for this purpose on account of the variation of the power required in proportion to the kind of grain being ground.

International feed grinders are made in the following types and sizes to meet all requirements:

Type B: 6, 8, and 10-inch — grinds corn on the cob.

Type C: 6 and 8-inch — grinds small grains and shelled corn.

Type D: 8 and 10-inch — grinds corn in the husk, alfalfa and Kafir corn in the head.

There are other features which you can see for yourself if you will drop in for a demonstration the next time you are in town.

Needed Law.

That dear young mother down the street a place came to us almost in tears yesterday and asked us if we wouldn't use our influence for the immediate emigration of a law limiting grandmothers to an eight-hour day, explaining that then by working all night with the baby she might undermine the spelling done in the course of the time when she had no control over her child.—Columbus (O.) Value of Work.

Idleness standing in the midst of unattempted tasks is always tending to humility. Work touches the keys of endless activity, opens the infinity, and stands awestruck before the immensity of what there is to do. I am sure we all know the fine, calm, sober humbleness of men who have tried themselves against the tasks of life. It was great in Paul, and in Luther, and in Cromwell. It is something that never comes into the character, never shows in the face, of a man who has not worked.—Phillips Brooks.

CARE OF FALL CALVES.

Youngsters Must Be Fed Liberally to Prevent Stunted Growth.

The average stockman is in a better position to give calves the right kind of care in the spring than in the fall, and yet in spite of this thousands of calves are dropped in the fall, the majority of which take poor luck during the winter, writes a correspondent of the Iowa Homestead.

Properly feeding the fall calf in winter is often a difficult proposition. We have found out to be an excellent feed for the fall calves if fed in connection with skim milk and a little oil meal. It seems that the oats hasten growth from the first and cold weather doesn't stunt them, as is sometimes the case of the fall calf during its first winter. I sometimes crush the oats, but don't know that it is any advantage over the shelled oats.

The calf can very easily be taught to eat small grains. We teach them to eat a small amount of grain as soon as they are started off to skim milk. Always feed the grain dry.

The calf that comes in the fall must have closer attention than the ones that arrive in the spring. It will not make a profitable growth during the winter unless it is fed grain in connection with the skim milk. After the calf is a few weeks old it will begin to nibble at hay if it is put within its reach. Clover or alfalfa hay is good.

It is very expensive to rear the calves on whole milk and is not at all essential, for they can be successfully raised

It is alleged that there are more owners of Jersey cows in the United States than in all other countries combined. Their attractive appearance and adaptability as a milk and butter producer are the reasons for the widespread popularity of the Jersey cow. The cow pictured is a Jersey and has a record of 56 pounds of butter in one month.

On skim milk if grain is given them, the skim milk must be given warm and the milk pan kept clean. A little ensilage can be fed in winter, but care must be used in feeding this at first, as it might cause a digestive disturbance.

It must be remembered that when butter fat is removed from milk the resulting product is richer in flesh building material than the whole milk. This being the case, the skim milk is balanced if the calf is fed liberally on corn.

Time and again it has been demonstrated by our experiment stations that cornmeal constitutes a most satisfactory kind of grain for calves when skim milk is used liberally. Ground oats, or even whole oats, may be also used to advantage. This grain is richer in mineral materials, and there is, therefore, some advantage derived from combining a ration composed primarily of oats. If laminitis strikes, a calf will start to eat when it is five to six weeks old, and after that it will use grain in considerable quantities. Care should be taken to keep its meal clean and sweet, and this means that no more grain should be fed than will be consumed there and then. The calf is dairy in its tastes, and indeed little virtue is exercised in this matter as it is raised in brooders or after their foster mothers have left them or been taken away.

The farm, with its unlimited range for the growing birds, offers ideal conditions for raising light Brahmas. The free range they are not inclined to take on flesh rapidly, but they develop wonderful bone, frame and stamina, just the things that are most essential for the fowl as is intended by a breeder of early winter fowlers for market.

If a bunch of birds are to be raised for market, they can be vered and housed at some convenient place where it is easiest for the feeding and watering. When it comes to yarding them, a three foot fence is plenty high. The scraps from the table mixed with corn meal and sour milk will put on fat in a surprising rate and give these increased flavor that is not to be beaten.

No need to go to the trouble of raising Light Brahmas cockerels, for they will reach three pounds normally at eight months and can be pushed to twenty and fourteen pounds under favorable conditions.

There is a problem on every farm and here the Light Brahmas shines during those winter months when every other breed almost requires specially constructed quarters if eggs are to be forthcoming. This breed does not require pampering and apparently the less of it they have the more eggs they lay. Their small pens are important to the coldest weather and their monotonous fancies, well covered and cushioned with abundant straw, are ideally built for withstand cold weather.

Turnips as a Cow Feed.

Turnips have a distinct tendency toward taking milk when fed to cows. This is unfortunate, for turnips are easily grown, yield largely, are palatable, and cattle do well feeding upon them. They are excellent for feeding dry stock and young stuff, but they should be used sparingly for feeding cows giving milk. They may be fed in limited amounts by feeding them immediately after milking and having the air in the milking barn free from all odors originating from the turnips at milking periods.

Examine the Rooster.

Many a poultryman says, "There isn't a chicken house on my place, when he has never really looked at his birds carefully enough to know. If your eyes are poor put on some glasses that magnify and look again. Then get busy. Some poultrymen should be compelled to spend a few nights in a 'piggy' bed." Farm and Fireside.

The Hen's Bath.

The dust bath should be roomy and constantly renewed, since it may get full of lice or vermin. Any good sized box may serve. It should be low enough for the fowls easily to get into and roomy enough for them to flutter and dust themselves freely.

POULTRY and EGGS

A WORD FOR BRAHMAS.

Profitable Farm Bird Both For Eggs and Market Purposes.

For the average farmer there is more money in roosters than in hens because once past the broiler stage the mortality is exceedingly small, writes H. C. Wood, secretary Light Brahmas club. Consequently the cost of production and raising to the rooster stage as compared with the increased price the roosters bring should normal, show a greater profit than there is in marketing hens when we take into consideration the mortality for the taxidermist.

After three or four days he begins to wander along the highway and across the fields. He had brought with him a fowling piece, and with this he took a few snapshots of robins and bluebirds, and he skinned them himself and cured the skins.

About half a mile from Grafton was a farm belonging to a man named Sweet. His land ran back from the highway to a small creek, and a part of this land was a sandstone ridge. It ended in a bluff about fifteen feet high at the creek. The stranger was seen walking along this ridge several times, and he spent quite a little of his time along the creek. The reports of his gun were often heard, but he brought in very little game. From this it was concluded that he was a poor shot.

A man with a wise and a keen eye took a pipe of brass and file it to a point in a few hours, and that dust will go closely resemble gold dust that an ordinary person will be deceived. If a spoonful of that dust is poured into a gun it can be easily shot into soft sand stone. That is one way of "sighting" a gun. Other real gold dust is used. The ornithologist was shooting birds.

That ridge of sandstone had been there for centuries, and no one could remember far when that old pasture had been made any use of except to provide sandy grass for a flock of sheep. The present owner was dimmed when the stranger asked him price for the land. When the buyer was satisfied he was very much elated. He had received $100 in cash for his almost worthless ridge. Mr. Meadows was probably asked a hundred times in the next week of what use he could possibly make of the land, but his replies were not satisfactory to any one. It was two weeks after the sale and the recording of the deed when he came in from his daily walk one day with a chunk of the sandstone wrapped in paper in his hand. That sandstone was white with specks of gold, and when the stone was crumbled in the fingers there was gold in the middle of it. When it was pounded up into dust with a mallet the most doubtful man in Grafton lost his last doubts.

There was no end for any one to use. Mr. Meadows, who by picked up that stone, Every one knew that it must have come from the ridge.

Next morning there were not only twenty but 200 citizens who went out to the gold fields. They walked along the sand stone ridge from the highway to the creek, and they waded up and down the creek. Yes, it was in sight for many feet up and down the creek.

In getting back to the tavern Mr. Meadows would have gone to his room to write some important letters, but a crowd detained him. There were quite a number of wealthy men in Grafton, and they saw a chance to add to their wealth. They wanted to know if Mr. Meadows would form a stock company and let them subscribe at least half the capital. If he wouldn't do that, would sell claim along the ridge and the creek? His reply was that he would think it over.

When the stranger had wrestled with his thoughts he called in the most prominent citizens and said,

Gentlemen, I have gone over this thing a hundred times. Some of you want a stock company, and some of you want to buy claims; and the owners can do what they like with the ore once it is out.

I don't know how the gold comes

I have seen only just what you have been seen. You will have to go it up, and so will I. I make a good ante.

It was understood that every sale should be for cash down and the deeds were to be delivered on the spot.

The reader should be prepared to hear that when the meadow and the bottom come there were at least 500 people on the spot.

The first choice of claims sold for $2,000. The second claim was the one next to it, and it sold for almost as much as the first. The last two claims were located in the bed of the creek, although no gold showed there.

The entire whole thing was a bank run. Every claim buyer was up at an early hour next morning, and if he did not wield a pick or a crowbar himself he had hired one or two men to work for him. In the midst of the rumble the stranger settled his bill at the hotel and disappeared, taking with him many thousand dollars.

Meadows was never heard of any more. Two or three days after he had disappeared some of the "old" was engaged by one competent to do it, and he was not long in declaring that the gold was pretty good brass.

Most of the ridge is there yet, and the sheep wander around as of yore.

There were no wolves and no bears, but the foxes were numerous.

Grafton simply swallowed the fraud and kept as quiet as possible over it, till the next stranger that came along with a discovery to sell will have to have wings to fly out of that town instead of a fool.

Jas. J. Thompson, for sixteen years Sergeant of Arms of the Court of Appeals, died at his home in Frankfort of heart disease.

The 1916 Kentucky State Fair netted a profit of $1,864, according to the financial statement submitted by Secretary W. J. Gough to the State Board of Agriculture.

For the first time in many months no sunrise was recorded in Louisville during October. There were 253 deaths and 15 births in the city. Eleven persons died a violent death, four of whom were slain.

The Southeastern Kentucky Dental Association held its annual meeting at Paducah and decided to establish a system of training in the public schools of that section in the care of the teeth.

"Uncle David" Galloway died at his home at Lino, near Mansfieldville. He had reached the advanced age of 98. He leaves four sons and three daughters, thirty grandchildren and thirty-three great grandchildren.

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad company filed suit in the United States District Court in Louisville questioning the constitutionality of the recently enacted Adamson eight-hour law for railroad employees.

Tom Nolen, 39, Deputy Sheriff of Perry County, was shot and almost instantly killed by a negro whom he sought to arrest. As Nolen fell he fired, fatally injuring one of the negroes. Nolen formerly lived in Breathitt County.

W. R. Cowan, who says he deserted from the navy at Norfolk, surrendered to authorities at Lexington. He said he wanted to go back to Norfolk and rejoin his company in the marine corps. Cowan is a resident of Urbana, Lincoln county.

Twenty-four students of high schools in the state of California, in charge of Professor H. H. Crocker, head of the Department of Animal Husbandry of the University of California, visited Lexington and inspected the big stock farms around that city.

All immediate danger of a strike of teamsters and teammen of the I. & N. railroad was averted when Milton H. Smith, President of the road, agreed to submit the case to mediation. The agreement was brought by Judge W. L. Chambers, of the Federal Board of Mediation.

Immediate release of coal cars by "borrowing" lines and the return of the equipment to the railroads owning them was ordered by Commissioner Charles C. McFerth at the inquiry being conducted in Louisville into the car shortage situation by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Let your poster out of jail; gone to Louisville," was scolded on a piece of paper left by a burglar who entered a drug store in Lexington. The cash register was robbed and some of the goods taken. Henry Davis, former partner at the store, is in jail charged with robbing the store some time ago.

A forest fire, which burned for four days, destroyed between four and five square miles of timber in the Madison neighborhood, in north Christian County. Desperate work kept a number of farmhouses from being consumed. Rain checked the fire and put it under control.

The Retail Grocers' Association in Louisville, have entered the milk strike fight. The association has appointed a committee to determine if the action of the Kentucky Milk Producers Association has violated the poling law, through its concerted movement to cut off the supply of milk from distributors.

The engagement has been announced of Robert Worth Bingham of Louisville, once mayor of the city and later Chancellor of the Jefferson Circuit Court, to Mrs. Henry M. Phager, widow of Henry M. Phager, one of the founders of the Standard Oil Company, who left an estate estimated at $60,000 to his widow.

Judgment for the sum of $11,855 against the H. & T. Railway Company was entered in the Jefferson Circuit Court. The amount represents unpaid taxes for nine years past, on rolling stock and franchises which the railroad claimed exempt. In defense, before it was engaged in an interstate business.

Bond issues favorably voted included $200,000 improvement of the water supply for Versailles, $9,000 for a light plant at Murray, $10,000 for waterworks and light plant at Olive Hill, and for 10 school improvements at Covington. An indication of progress was visible in Ashland by the adoption of a $20,000 bond issue for school improvements.

The United States attorney retorting that at Louisville has been asked to sit in the dock of the grand jury to represent the Kentucky national guard which is short about 1,000 men. The test was a verdict in a case of libelation from the courtroom of the ex-chief magistrate's Island, N. Y., by Major John Battle, who has charge of the garrison at Louisville.

John Bowles, 59, farmer of near Hopkinsville, killed his wife and son-in-law, James Aldridge, 20, and then committed suicide. Mrs. Bowles had filed suit for divorce, but recently withdrew it. Bowles fired five pistol shots into her body. Then he rode to Hopkinsville and slew Aldridge with a shotgun as he rose from bed. Bowles was found with a pistol bullet in his head.

It is estimated that thousands of Kentucky women, including many in Louisville and vicinity, "fell for the fable" at the Minneapolis, Minn., who offered to lend a guaranteed $450 per month for a dime. The dead letter office at Washington, D. C., has received over 100,000 letters containing a dime each that were forwarded from Minneapolis. Many of these were sent by Kentucky women, who no doubt are awaiting for their petticoats and wondering why they don't come. Instead of getting the petticoat, each woman will receive from Washington her dime enclosed in a coin envelope. It is estimated this petticoat fake will cost the government $25,000, figuring cost of returning the dimes, clerical help, etc.

The State Board of Valuation assessed whisky at $12 the barrel, the same as last year. This yields an annual revenue in the state of approximately $160,000.

The Workmen's Compensation Board passed on 167 claims, including three permanent disability claims. The full amounts allowed by law were given to the estates of Gabe Johnson, killed in the Straight Creek company's mine; James Henry Minters, killed in the Winslow company mines, and Robert H. Smith, killed in the Bond Jumbo company mine.

The Court of Appeals refused to disturb the $300 verdict awarded by Amos Leslie against Harry Waites, chief of the Blue Department in Van Lear. It was held that the insulated Coal Company was in no wise liable for the "shower bath" given to Leslie by Waites in Van Lear in September.

Police Judge Riley of Lexington does not believe that a woman and her husband should be separated. He defended this in police court, when Mrs. Faustine Kelly faced him on a charge of vagrancy. She said her only means of support was her husband, who was in the workshop. "I don't believe in man and his wife should be separated," he said, "so you may join him there for thirty days."

Guaranteed milk for Lexington is a probability within reach of those now being put forward to the Division of Health, according to the belief of Dr. John H. MacIntire, its head. The road long coveted is to be carried through a system of elevated hills which will give the department control of the purity of the supply. A central inspection station, through which all milk sold must pass, is his solution.

Mrs. Rosa Hecht and her daughter, Miss Edna Hecht, were arrested in Toledo, charged with the murder of their Uncle Hecht an ex-soldier, who was shot to death recently. Stories told by members of the family were to the effect that Hecht was shot to death by a negro burglar. Police determined to arrest the women after the shooting. Hecht, formerly lived in Breathitt County.

It is estimated this petticoat fake will cost the government $25,000, figuring cost of returning the dimes, clerical help, etc.

John Bowles, 59, farmer of near Hopkinsville, killed his wife and son-in-law, James Aldridge, 20, and then committed suicide. Mrs. Bowles had filed suit for divorce, but recently withdrew it. Bowles fired five pistol shots into her body. Then he rode to Hopkinsville and slew Aldridge with a shotgun as he rose from bed. Bowles was found with a pistol bullet in his head.

It is estimated that thousands of Kentucky women, including many in Louisville and vicinity, "fell for the fable" at the Minneapolis, Minn., who offered to lend a guaranteed $450 per month for a dime. The dead letter office at Washington, D. C., has received over 100,000 letters containing a dime each that were forwarded from Minneapolis.
